

Fredericksburg Beer

Bottled By the Brewery

Is Now In San Francisco

The Famous California Brew, Long Noted for Its Superior
Excellence by Discriminating Beer Drinkers,
Comes Into This Market

Fredericksburg Beer has always occupied a high place among malt productions. The men who first brewed it in that model brewery at San Jose took their work and their product, long before a reputation had been extended through the country. Superior quality has never been equalled.

The Fredericksburg Brewery has kept pace with modern improvements in brewing methods, and there are few equals of it in equipment on the Pacific Coast. Fredericksburg Beer represents the beer making art at its best—results obtainable only when proved modern processes of making are coupled with the highest-quality ingredients obtainable.

Fredericksburg Beer has been a familiar household name in California for many years. Its uniform excellence has won it hosts of patrons and the announcement that it has come into the San Francisco market in bottling by the brewery, assures a quick and successful production in this field.

"It is a good food," says a prominent physician. Every one who drinks Fredericksburg Beer has a tonic upbuilding effect. It has been the favorite of the San Francisco Brewing Company. It is the best of the California Brews.

The same care that goes into the manufacture of the beer is also in the bottling. Many a good beer is spoiled in the bottling process, and this work is done expertly and under the right conditions can uniformly be guaranteed. Fredericksburg Beer is bottled perfectly by the brewery, and when it goes into the home of the consumer it is as fine a product as can be obtained anywhere.
