SOMERSET

Chief Patrick Donahue of the Somerset police received a telegram Monday night from District Attorney Woolwine of Los Angeles, who is prosecuting the dynamite conspiracy case there, asking the chief if he could assist the government by giving testimony regarding the dynamiting of the Brightman street bridge in April, 1908. This explosion preceded by several months the dynamiting of structural iron in the railroad yard at Somerset, for which George Davis, alias O'Donnell, was arrested that night. The Somerset chief wired in reply that he was able to testify to that fact. Yesterday morning, in consequence of his reply, he received another telegram instructing him to leave here in ample time to appear in the Los Angeles court and testify in the case not later than December 16th. The expenses of the witness, according to telegraphic advice, would be paid immediately upon his arrival in the western city. After pondering the matter over Chief Donahue sent another telegram yesterday afternoon, stating that he would not leave home until such time as transportation for the entire trip had been furnished, in accordance with the original communication from the district attorney, dated November 13th which specifically agreed that railroad travel would be provided for the witness the moment he was ready to start on his transcontinental journey. While Chief Donahue did not make any official investigation of the dynamiting of the Brightman street bridge he heard the explosion that night and examined the structure the following day, observing the damage done by it. Whether that is the only point on which his testimony is desired was not stated. The delay in summoning him as a witness, following the communication of mid-November, was believed to have resulted from the fact that Davis, alias O'Donnell, had taken the stand and practically told the jury all of the circumstances attending his capture by the Somerset chief and his sentence to the house of correction for murderous assault on that official. The telegram of Monday, however, would indicate that the government proposes to overlook nothing which may be of value in prosecuting its charge against the prisoners accused of dynamiting the Los Angeles Times building.

THEY REFUSE TO EAT

At periods in most childrens' lives they fail to relish their meals and refuse to eat even the delicacies prepared to tempt their appetites. They lack ambition, and growth seems impeded, which causes anxiety and worry.

To compel them to eat is a grave mistake, because nutrition is impaired. Healthful exercise in fresh air and sunshine is important, but equally important is a spoonful of Scott's Emulsion three times a day to feed the tissues and furnish food-energy to improve their blood, aid nutrition and sharpen their appetites.

The highly concentrated medicinal-food in Scott's Emulsion supplies the very elements children need to build up their strength. They relish Scott's—it is free from alcohol.
