The Fable of BOCK BEER

During the mediaeval period two neighboring towns had long engaged in a rivalry as to which brewed the best beer. During a dispute one day in early spring between two brewmasters, one from each of the towns in question, it was claimed by one that the beer manufactured by the other lacked strength. To settle the dispute, the following test was proposed: Each brewmaster was to consume a gigantic tankard of the beer manufactured by his opponent, after which he was to stand on one leg and thread a needle. The loser claimed that a goat that had butted in through the circle of men surrounding the opponents was responsible for his downfall. The winner laughingly replied: "It was the bock (German word for goat) in the beer." From that time it became customary to brew a special dark beer called "Bock Beer" and place it on sale in the spring of each year.
