"From one generation to another, goes Fitger's secret for honest beer enjoyment"

John's John Fitzger, Fitger's famous Master Brewer, following a long career as a brewer at the famous St. Paul Brewery, is shown in the photograph. He is a man of about 55 years, with a friendly expression. Next to him is his daughter, Johnnie, who is also a well-known figure in the brewing industry. They are both dressed in formal attire, and the setting appears to be a high-quality establishment, possibly a hotel or a club. The photograph captures a moment of quiet conversation between the two, highlighting the family's long-standing tradition in the brewing business.

THE means you'll always go on getting that fine, famous, enjoyable beer from Fitger's year after year, is because brewing good beer is a family tradition at Fitger's. John Fitzger's skill has made our beer what it is for 35 years, and now John in his father's shoes again when it comes to having a knack for making beer with that genuine Old-Country flavor. Their secret for producing such is what makes our beer so keen and refreshing. And the slow hopper way we let our beer age, gives it the taste, Old-Country flavor you're likely to miss in a sweet beer. So enjoy beer at its best. Order a case of Fitger's Nordlager Beer from your dealer right now.

Declares Youth Trampled Garden

CHICKADEE, W. Va., Aug. 18.—(AP)—A 10-year-old boy today began a 10-day jail sentence today on a charge of chaining a man 32 years old to a bed for a month "to keep him out of the garden."

State Young W. B. Murphy said David Dies also admitted he confined the young man in his bedroom in an effort to prevent him from being taken to a state institution where the father, now estranged, had been a patient and where his mother had died.

Murphy said the son, Roy, is mentally unstable.

He said Dies was on a charge of assault and battery. Dies said he chained Dies "to keep him out of the garden—he would trample it down."

Magistrate Charles E. Smith, in imposing sentence, said he made Dies promise "not to chain the boy any more, but to give him good treatment."

Authorities, trying to save the son hospitalized, said the state hospital is crowded to capacity.

Price 'Padding' Charges Sifted

They were enumerated, but disagreed frequently on cost items not specified in the agreement.

A large gallery of spectators crowded into the committee rooms for the hearing. Notable among them were C. B. Carlgren, chairman of the former state board of control, abolished by Governor Stassen's reorganization, and William Mahoney, former Labor state board control commissioner.

Louis Fischer and son, Melvin, proprietors of the Victory Printing Co., appeared with counsel. They were expected to take the stand later in the day.

Kitchel testified that a "double charge" was made for certain composition.

Kitchel further asserted, as corroborated by Houston, that a bill for $25 was sent in July 1937, including 170 and a charge of $1230 for another job of the same kind.

Kitchel said he figured more of the jobs according to the Franklin price list and that an one particular job which was billed at $90, he set down $13.50 as a good sale charge.

Kitchel said that many of the items were about 25 per cent higher than he considered a reasonable charge.

Girl Accuses Bund Leaders

warned by Mrs. August Clapprecht. In saying nothing about it, Miss Voorce identified Mrs. Clapprecht as a Bund leader and the wife of a Bund leader in New Jersey.

Earlier, she said Bund leaders attempted to instill the idea that Nazi principles were far superior to "American institutions and ideals."

"They said," she testified, "that National Socialism (the party of Hitler in Germany) was the only thing that could save us—I don't know what we were going to be saved from."

"They said we Germans weren't getting consideration in this country and it was about time we spoke up."

STUDY HITLER'S LIFE

The leaders she said at the outset, required Bund youth to study the life of Hitler from pamphlets which came from Germany.

Continuing questions about the camp, Chairman Dies asked if immorality was not contrary to the principles of Adolf Hitler as enunciated in his book "Mein Kampf."

Dies said Hitler had told of efforts to break immorality.

"That's what they call 'pure,'" Miss Voorce said.

DENIES SHE IS SPY

She answered negatively when Dies asked whether she entered the Bund movement to "become an informant."

"When why didn't you quit?" Dies asked.

"Because these leaders wouldn't let me alone," she replied.

Saying she left camp after three days because she was "disgusted," she declared that Friedrich Wanderscheid, South Brooklyn Bund leader, had made immoral advances to her which she repulsed.

Miss Voorce was called as a witness in the committee's effort to establish whether the Bund was tied to Nazi propaganda agencies.

She told the committee of having delivered a mysterious sealed letter from a former staff member of the German-American Bund newspaper to a "high political leader" on the S. S. in Hamburg.

She said the letter was given her by Severin Waterscheid, now in prison on a morals charge, after Dies asked if she ever had been asked to divulge any of this country's secrets, the whereabouts of shipyards and munitions factories, while on a trip she made to Germany.

LINKS BUND WITH NAZIS

The witness, who testified that because her father was Greek and her mother German she had difficulty in getting into the Bund, provided the committee with testimony apparently linking the Bund to the Nazi government-controlled League for German in Foreign Countries.

"Dinkelschker," she said, "instructed us in deep sea months about the whole matter. He said it would be very dangerous if any one found out about the trip."

Then, the witness continued, Dinkelschker showed the traveling youths a letter from Hugo Haas, former Kilderman leader of the Bund now connected with the League for German citizens abroad, setting out detailed instructions as to the conduct of those going on the trip.

She said the youths were sent to Germany to get instructions in the Nazi movement so that they could come back to this country and "spread propaganda" about it.

When Dies asked her why she was testifying to these things, Miss Voorce replied:

"They (Bund leaders) made me do such things so bad for this government that I felt that I was doing wrong."

She said she quit the Bund for this reason last summer.

"This committee wants only the truth and the whole truth," Dies said.

"I'm telling the truth," she replied simply.

DIES ASKS FOR NAMES

Dies observed that the witness had testified to "an astounding state of affairs" in the Long Island Bund camp and asked for the names of others who might be related to it in connection with the immorality charges.

Rhea Whitley, committee counsel, explained, however, that it would be difficult to obtain such witnesses because they had gone to different parts of the country.

Miss Voorce said that after she had left the camp, Ernst Weide, whom she identified as "propaganda minister of South Brooklyn," came to her and urged her to "talk" about the things she had seen there.

After talking things over with her mother, she continued, she came to believe that she had misunderstood the events that took place and agreed to continue in the Bund.

VOYAGE KEPT SECRET

In a plan to keep the youth group's voyage secret, the witness testified, Dinkelschker's name did not appear on the passenger list and members of the party were instructed never to address him by his last name.

"We were told to call him 'Dink,'" she said.

Members of the group were not permitted to wear uniforms or to assemble, she added, except after midnight "when everybody else was asleep."

At these sessions, she testified, the youths lined up and were given instructions as to names and titles of officials in Germany.

Later, Miss Voorce said that the person to whom she gave the letter was "the political leader" stationed abroad in Hamburg. She said she never learned his name.

ON ALL GERMAN SHIPS

All German ships have such political leaders, she declared, saying she had seen some of them at Bund meetings in New York and in the office of Fritz Kuhn, German-American Bund leader.

She was positive of her identification of the recipient of the letter, she said, because she saw him in uniform when, during the voyage, the crew and some of the passengers voted on the absorption of Austria. Miss Voorce said "the political leader" wore his uniform to conduct the election.

Miss Voorce said the Hamburg-American Steamship line, the German-Tourist railway, the German government, and the League for German in Foreign Lands participated in standing travelers' expenses.

Among instructions given by leaders of youths on the trip, she said, were that "we were to be

CONTRADICTS KUBIN

Miss Voorce said that in Bund camps youths were taught from pamphlets which originated in Germany about Hitler's rise to power, how the National Socialist movement had appeared in the movement in Germany and how it could be made applicable in this country.

Referring to testimony given Thursday by Fritz Kuhn, that the Bund was interested only in promoting American ideals, Whitley asked if this were true.

"It is false," the witness said.

"They always found fault with this government," Miss Voorce continued. "They said it was controlled by a minority and was not taking care of the other races."

"What was this minority?" Whitley asked.

"The Jews," she replied.

She said girls were required to speak German at their gatherings.

"We were found one or two times if we spoke English," she declared.

Miss Voorce also demonstrated with upraised arm and extended hand how the Bund girls were required to salute when they started their meetings.

Before Miss Voorce began her testimony, Dies said it was "the sense of the committee" that in conducting the investigation all "immaterial and inconsequential matter" should be excluded.

He added also that hereafter all "voluntary statements" would be stricken from the record.

One voluntary statement was made Thursday by Fritz Kuhn, leader of the Bund organization. In the effort that Attorney General Frank Murphy addressed a Bund meeting in Detroit in 1934, Murphy, commenting on the statement, said he would not remember making the address but had addressed Germans during his campaign for governor that year.
